Introduction. Chemical probes offer a powerful way to perturb proteins to produce graded (dose-dependent) gain- (agonism) or loss- (antagonism) of-function effects that are acute and reversible in cells and organisms (Weiss et al., 2007). Small molecules that selectively modulate proteins can also serve as leads for the development of novel therapeutics.

Whole-exome sequencing was performed on 363 HCC cases for a mean coverage of 95% of targeted bases with a minimum of 20-fold coverage. In total, 12,136 genes had non-silent mutations, and 26 genes were determined to be significantly mutated genes (SMGs) by the MutSigCV algorithm (Lawrence et al., 2014) (Figure 1, Tables S2A and S2B, STAR Methods).
