I am taking a break from my month long "Let's Go Gluten Free Series" in order to bring this blog back to "ground zero." Ground Zero on this blog has always been a search for the root cause of Hashimoto's. Anyone who has been following me for the last 9-10 years has come away with the understanding that I have always felt we would find the root cause....one day!

In this case, however, the thyroid becomes underactive, not due to the gland underfunctioning, but because of an autoimmune disease response. An autoimmune response refers to any disease process whereby the body's own antibodies, mistake an organ or tissue as alien, and attack it.. Thus in Hashimoto Thyroiditis, the thyroid gland does not produce enough thyroxine due to inflammation.
